The screenshot shows the Replit platform interface. On the left, there's a sidebar with various navigation options: + Create App, Import code or design, Home (selected), Apps, Published apps, Integrations, Usage, and Explore more. A large callout bubble from 'GuideGPT' provides instructions: 'Great job! I'll guide you over here on your screen. Let's begin creating your first website.' It also says 'Okay! You can start building website now!' and 'Before we start building, please type your ideas into "Describe the idea you want to build" box. and Click "Start Chat" button.' Below this, it lists 'Your Starter Plan' with 'Free Apps' (1/10 created) and 'Agent Usage' (0% used), and a 'Upgrade to Replit Core' button. At the bottom, it says 'Install Replit on' with icons for Mac and Windows.

The main workspace has a dark background. At the top, there's a search bar and a 'Create App' button. The central area has a yellow arrow pointing to a text input field labeled 'Describe the idea you want to build...'. To the right of the input field is a 'Start chat' button, which is also circled in yellow. Below the input field, there are theme settings ('Auto theme') and category tabs: Web app, Data app, 3D Game, General, and Agents & Automations (Beta). The 'Agents & Automations' tab is currently selected. At the bottom of the workspace, there's a section titled 'Your recent Apps' with a thumbnail for 'ScreenShareChat'.
